

The DPO Course: Data Protection Law, Management and Compliance

The Drew Data Protection and Cybersecurity Academy is pleased to introduce its inaugural course - The DPO course: Data Protection Law, Management and Compliance.

This course provides a comprehensive introduction to Singapore's Personal Data Protection Act 2012 (PDPA), the role of the Personal Data Protection Commission and other regulators, and the development and implementation of organisational strategies, structures, policies and practices necessary for effective management of data protection issues and compliance. It also covers the international context of data protection, other laws which may protect personal data, data breach management and upcoming changes to the PDPA.

This course serves as the foundation for advanced courses in data protection law, policy and compliance and complements courses in other areas such as cybersecurity and corporate governance.

Who should attend?

- Data Protection Officers (DPOs) and compliance professionals
- Privacy and data protection counsels
- Executives, managers and staff involved in the collection, use and management of personal data and/or other data activities
- IT and cybersecurity professionals

Course Director

David N. Alfred

Before joining Drew & Napier, David was Chief Counsel of the Personal Data Protection Commission (PDPC), a role he held since 2013. David advised the PDPC on all its legal affairs including the administration, application and enforcement of Singapore's Personal Data Protection Act 2012 (PDPA), legal policy and development, and cross-border legal issues relating to data protection. Prior to his role with the PDPC, David was Deputy General Counsel with the Info-communications Development Authority of Singapore (IDA), the predecessor of the current Info-communications Media Development Authority, where he was a core member of the team that advised on Singapore's data protection policy and oversaw the development of the PDPA (amongst other matters).

A senior lawyer with more than 20 years of experience, David is an analytical and strategic thinker who brings with him a deep wealth of knowledge and substantial expertise in laws and regulations relating to data protection, digital technology, international telecommunications and the Internet. David holds LLB and LLM degrees from the National University of Singapore, an MBA from the University of Chicago and the CIPP/A, CIPM and CIPT certifications. He has been designated a Fellow of Information Privacy by the International Association of Privacy Professionals.
